Dear Mr Chan.

I am sorry to advise you that, after thoughtful consideration, the faculty Admissions Committee has denied your application for admission to Albany Law School. Please know that I understand how disappointing this result may be for you. We receive approximately 2,500 applications for only 250 seats in our entering class, resulting in a particularly competitive enrollment process

Please be assured that no application is automatically accepted or denied. We have a highly individualized application review procedure and carefully examined all the materials you presented. If you do attend another ABA accredited law school and remain interested in Albany Law at the end of your first year, you may wish to consider applying as a transfer student. Our Admissions Committee would review your application based upon your performance at the other institution.

Thank you for applying to Albany Law School and I wish you much success as you continue your academic pursuits

Sincerely

Dear Mr Chan

On behalf of the Admissions Committee of Baylor Law School, I regret to inform you that, after a careful review, your application for admission to the Fall 2009 quarter entering class has been denied. If you have also applied for admission to one of our other entering classes, you will be notified about that application once we make that separate decision.

In examining your application materials, we carefully noted your academic and non-academic performance and accomplishments, as well as your performance on the Law School Admission Test. In arriving at our decision, the Committee has attempted to assess not only your potential for success at Baylor Law School, but also the strength of your candidacy as compared to the candidacies of other applicants for that same entering class.

We appreciate your interest in Baylor and wish you success in your future endeavors.

Dear Mr Chan:

I regret to inform you that the Admissions Committee has denied your application for admission to the Fall 2009 entering class at Boston College Law School.

The Admissions Committee carefully reviewed all aspects of your application including your academic record, personal statement, LSAT score(s), letters of recommendation, work experience and extra-curricular activities. This year, we anticipate receiving close to 7,000 applications, and we are again constrained by the limited number of seats available in our incoming class.

Thank you for your interest in Boston College Law School. I wish you the best in your pursuit of a legal education and regret that our decision is not a favorable one.

Dear Mr Chan.

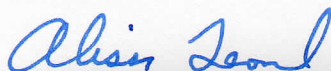

I regret to inform you that the Admissions Committee of Boston University School of Law is unable to offer you admission to the Fall 2009 entering class.

Each year the number of qualified applicants to Boston University School of Law far exceeds the number of available spaces. This year, the Admissions Committee was faced with the difficult task of selecting an entering class from over 6,000 applicants. Unfortunately, we are unable to offer admission to many qualified candidates. Please be assured, however, that we reached our decision after a thorough review of your application and supporting materials.

Should you decide to begin at another law school this fall, you are welcome to apply to us as a transfer student next year. The Admissions Committee seeks transfer applicants who have performed with distinction during their first year of law school.

Thank you for your interest in Boston University. I wish you success in all of your academic and professional pursuits.

Dear Mr. Chan.

The Admissions Committee of Case Western Reserve University School of Law has reviewed your application for Fall 2009. I am sorry to inform you that its decision was not favorable. We realize that this is a disappointment. Please know that all of the materials in your file were carefully examined and the selection process was very competitive.

We appreciate your interest in our law school and sincerely hope that your educational goals are achieved. If your plans for the coming year include law school elsewhere, but you are still interested in Case Western Reserve, you should know that we do accept transfer students each summer for the following school year. The main selection criterion is law school performance. LSAT score and undergraduate academic performance are not quite as important, but are factors in the decision. If you would like to discuss this transfer option in greater detail, please contact us at the telephone number listed above.

Thank you again for your application to Case Western Reserve University School of Law. Best wishes in your law school search and in your future career plans.

Dear Mr. Chan.

The Admissions Committee at Cleveland-Marshall College of Law has completed its review of your application for the fall 2009 entering class and unfortunately, you have not been granted admission. We receive far more applications than spaces available in our first year class, therefore, we are unable to extend offers of admission to many of our outstanding applicants.

I realize this comes as a disappointment; however, be assured that although LSAT scores and undergraduate grades were of primary consideration, all aspects of your application file, including personal statement and letters of recommendation, were considered in our decision.

Given the number of people who apply to Cleveland-Marshall, we cannot grant an applicant's request for an appearance before the Committee and all admission decisions are final for this application year. If you would like to be considered for a future term, we invite you to apply again. If you will be attending law school elsewhere, we do accept a number of transfer students each year. Dear Mr Chan.

The Admissions Committee for the University of Colorado Law School has carefully considered your application for admission for the fall 2009 entering class. I am sorry to inform you that we are unable to offer you admission.

The large number of applications we receive relative to our small class size makes the competition for admission very intense and the committee's choices extremely difficult. We know that this situation results in our being unable to admit many capable and highly motivated people who will be assets to the legal profession.

Thank you for your interest in the University of Colorado Law School. We wish you every success in your professional career

Dear Mr. Chan.

The Admissions Committee has completed its review of your application for admission to the University of Connecticut School of Law. I regret to inform you that we are unable to offer you admission to the class entering in the fall of 2009.

The Admissions Committee faced the daunting task of selecting the incoming class from a large and competitive applicant pool. Our applicants' academic and other qualifications were varied and quite extraordinary.

While we take seriously our mission as the public law school of a land-grant University to provide educational opportunity to as many qualified individuals as possible, the size of our faculty and our physical facilities is limited. Unfortunately, each year we must deny admission to many applicants who are otherwise well qualified for the study of law.

We appreciate your interest in the University of Connecticut School of Law, and thank you for permitting us to consider your application.

Dear Mr Chan:

After careful consideration of your application, I am sorry to inform you that we will be unable to offer you a place in the class entering this fall. I am sure that our action is a disappointment to you, but I want to assure you that this decision does not reflect our opinion of your ability to study or practice law. We have received a very large number of strong applications for the 190 seats in our first-year class. This means that we necessarily must disappoint many people who would have been fine students.

I hope you will remember that every year we accept a few transfer students into our second-year class. So, if Cornell is your top choice, you may want to consider a transfer application next year. The transfer decision is based primarily on superior academic performance during your first year at another American Bar Association accredited law school.

In closing, let me again express our regret that we cannot offer you a place in our class. I wish you the very best in pursuing what I am sure will be a successful and challenging legal career.

The Committee on Admission has just completed the review of your application to Emory University School of Law. After carefully considering all information in your application, we are not able to offer admission to you at this time.

As you know, applying to law school is a tedious process and extremely competitive. The large number of applicants places Emory in the category of being highly selective. It unfortunately prohibits us from offering spaces to many interesting and qualified people.

Dear Mr Chan.

After a thorough evaluation of your admissions file, we regret to inform you that your application for admission to the Fall 2009 entering class at the University of Florida Levin College of Law was denied by the Admissions Committee. A number of criteria are employed in evaluating each individual application. These criteria include undergraduate academic performance, the score(s) on the Law School Admissions Test, and all other relevant materials presented in the applicant's file, including, but not limited to, the applicant's admission statement, resume, and letters of evaluation.

Please be assured that this decision is in no way a reflection of your ability to succeed in the study of law. For the Fall 2009 Priority Pool, we received approximately 2,600 applications for a class of 300 students. Because of this competition for a limited number of seats, we must deny admission to a large number of well-qualified applicants. Be advised that the criterion to petition for reconsideration is outlined in the 2009 UF Law Prospectus.

We are very appreciative of your interest in our law program. Again, we regret that we were not able to act affirmatively on your application for admission to the Fall 2009 entering class. We wish you success in your future.

Dear Mr Chan:

The Admissions Committee has completed its review of your application for admission to the Fall 2009 entering class at Florida State Law. I regret to inform you that the Admissions Committee is unable to offer you admission. The number of applicants who scored extremely well on traditional predictors of success in law school far exceeds the number of seats available for entering students.

We recognize however, that after a year of attending law school, predictors of success fall by the wayside. Performance speaks for itself. If you attend another law school and perform very well within the top third of your class in your first year, we hope you will consider transferring to Florida State Law. Thank you for your interest in attending Golden Gate University School of Law and for submitting your application for admission. Regretfully, I am writing to inform you that your application has been denied and that we will not be able to offer you a seat in the fall 2009 entering class.

Each year Golden Gate Law receives applications from a wealth of highly qualified and talented people. All applications receive a comprehensive review with attention given to each applicant's academic achievement, standardized test scores, personal statement, letters of recommendation, extra-curricular activities and community involvement. We seek to admit students who are not only competitive in each of these areas, but who also bring a combination of work and life experience that we believe will enhance the learning environment and enrich our vibrant law school community.

Unfortunately, given the number of applications we receive each year, it is inevitable that we must deny many candidates who have strong qualifications in one or more areas of our assessment. In the event that you may decide to reapply for fall 2010, we will keep your current application and supporting documents on file for one year. You are also encouraged to submit new materials and additional information at that time.

Dear Mr. Chan:

The Admissions Committee of The University of Iowa College of Law has reviewed with care your application for admission, and consideration has been given to all of the quantitative and qualitative data submitted. We are sorry to advise you that the Committee did not find it possible to take favorable action, and accordingly, your application for admission to the 2009 entering class has been denied.

We have received many competitive applications for an entering class which will number only 225 students. A large majority (at least 85%) of those who apply are qualified to study law, and it is truly difficult for us to have to turn away so many qualified applicants.

Please be advised that this decision of denial of admission is not a statement on your ability to study law or become a productive member of the legal profession. It is an indicator, though, that within the context of The University of Iowa College of Law's applicant pool this year, there was some intense competition for admission, and we did not have room for many qualified applicants.

We would like to extend to you our best wishes for success in your search for a productive legal education and a successful career.

Dear Mr Chan:

The Faculty Committee on Admission has completed its review of your application to Loyola University Chicago School of Law. The law school usually receives about 4,000 applications, and unfortunately cannot offer admission to all candidates. Regretfully, I must inform you that we are unable to offer you a place in our entering Fall 2009 freshman JD class.

Since we are a small law school, we must turn away a large number of candidates for admission. Please be assured that your entire academic and personal file was carefully considered by the Faculty Committee on Admissions. In assessing an application for admission, the personal statements, resume, transcripts, curriculum, outside activities, and letters of recommendation are considered, as well as the LSAT and academic GPA.

Because such a careful initial review does occur, we cannot accept appeals on admissions decisions within the same application cycle. This includes requests to be considered for other divisions. First-time applicants who are unsuccessful in gaining admission may reapply next year. However, third applications are not encouraged and will be considered only if significant improvement is evident.

I am sorry to bring such disappointing news to you. We have tried to notify you early in the admission process to permit you to pursue applications to other law schools. Thank you for applying to Loyola and best wishes in your future endeavors.

Dear Mr Chan,

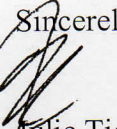

Thank you for applying to the University of Minnesota Law School. I regret however, that we are unable to offer you a position in the class entering in Fall 2009.

Each year, the Admissions Committee selects approximately 230 entering law students from among many excellent applicants. Members of our Admissions Committee carefully review all applications in their entirety in an effort to select those applicants who show the most promise for successful law study at Minnesota. The process is highly competitive and unfortunately, we must turn down numerous applicants to our program.

Should you successfully matriculate at another law school, please consider the University of Minnesota as a transfer option with which you could complete your legal education. We welcome transfer applications and we offer journal and moot court opportunities for our transfer students. Policies and deadlines will be available in early 2010. Our deadline for transfer applications for your cycle is July 1, 2010.

Thank you for your interest in the University of Minnesota Law School. Please accept our best wishes for success in your law school application process and your future legal career

Upon your request, the denial of your application has been reconsidered, and I regret to inform you that there has been no change in the decision to deny your application.

The Admissions Committee reviews all applications very carefully, giving primary weight to academic credentials and the LSAT. In addition, consideration is also given to your personal statement, letters of recommendation, work experience, the trend in your G.P.A., the quality and difficulty of courses taken, and other various factors that indicate diversity and academic promise.

Thank you for your interest in the University of Minnesota Law School. Please understand that the quality of the applicant pool and the limited number of positions in the entering class make for a highly competitive admissions process.

Please accept my best wishes for your future success.

Sincerely,

Julie Tigges

Dear Mr Chan.

Your application for admission to the Autumn 2009 entering class of The Ohio State University Moritz College of Law has been reviewed carefully using the criteria established by the admissions committee and the faculty of the College of Law. As a result of this review, I regret to inform you that we are unable to grant your request for admission. Admission to the Moritz College of Law is a highly competitive process and fewer than one in five students are accepted. Please understand that this decision was reached only after careful evaluation of your qualifications in comparison with those of other applicants. The decision is not intended to discourage your interest in pursuing a legal career.

Your interest in the Moritz College of Law is sincerely appreciated. On behalf of the admissions committee, I wish you success in your future endeavors.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr Chan:

The Committee on Admissions has carefully considered your application. I regret to inform you that we are unable to offer you admission to the School of Law. We expect more than 7,500 candidates to compete for admission this year, which means that the Committee must make difficult choices.

We hope you understand that our decision on your application is not an estimate of your potential as a law student or an attorney. Since the vast majority of our applicants are clearly capable of success in law school and beyond, we inevitably must turn away many whom we expect will succeed in law simply for lack of space in our class. Please accept our best wishes for your educational and professional success.

Dear Roy:

The Admissions Committee has completed its review of your application for admission. I am sorry to notify you that you have not been admitted to Northeastern University School of Law.

We appreciate the effort you put into your application and did not make this decision without a thorough review of your file. The fact that our admissions committee has not offered you one of our limited spaces should in no way discourage you from pursuing a law degree. Of those who apply, only a small percentage are admitted. With our limited enrollment and large number of applications, there are many fine candidates whom we are unable to accommodate.

We appreciate your interest in the School of Law. The other committee members join me in sending best wishes for a successful legal career.

Dear Mr Chan:

Your application for admission to Notre Dame Law School has been carefully and thoroughly reviewed by our Admissions Committee. Members of the Admissions Committee have evaluated your past academic performance, your personal and professional accomplishments, and your goals as described in your personal statement and supported by comments from individuals who furnished letters of recommendation.

In the course of the review process, the Committee also evaluated your candidacy in the context of the overall application pool, the mission of our Law School, and in light of the limited number of admission offers that we are able to extend. It is with regret, that we are not able to extend an offer of admission to you for next fall's entering class.

The Admissions Committee's decision has been made difficult by the significant competition for admission to a limited entering class of 180 students. The Admissions Committee appreciates your interest in Notre Dame Law School. We wish you every success in your future legal educational endeavors.

Dear Mr Chan.

Thank you for your application to the University of Pennsylvania Law School. I am writing on behalf of the Admissions Committee to inform you that, regretfully, we are unable to offer you a place in the fall 2009 entering class.

The evaluation process at Penn Law is a thorough and deliberate one and arriving at this decision was undoubtedly difficult. Our Admissions Committee includes admissions professionals, faculty, alumni, and third year students. Each file is carefully read by members of the Admissions Committee and many factors both academic and nonacademic are taken into consideration. What we find is that the number of qualified applicants far exceeds the number of available seats in the class. Indeed, we receive more than 5,800 applications for our class of 250 students. Given the competitiveness of our admissions process, we are unable to accept many fine candidates.

We congratulate you on your many achievements to date. Your intellectual drive and unique perspective will certainly allow you to follow a distinctive path. We appreciate your interest in the Law School and wish you great success in your future endeavors.

After careful and considerate review of your application for admission to the University of Pittsburgh School of Law, we are unfortunately unable to offer you a place in our incoming class for the Fall of 2009.

Over the past several years, the University of Pittsburgh School of Law has seen both the number and quality of applications for admission increase significantly. While we are unable to offer you a place at Pitt Law, we found great qualities in your application and know that you will add much to another law school.

Dear Mr. Chan:

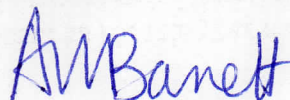

Upon review of your application materials, we regret to advise that your application for admission to the University of the Pacific, McGeorge School of Law, was not approved.

You may be assured that all of the information you furnished for your application file was considered. The most sobering fact faced by those reviewing application materials is the number of applicants who seek admission to the School of Law. Decisions reflect this competitiveness for the limited number of seats available and not a judgment about potential for either the study or practice of law.

For your information, admissions decisions for this year's entering class are not reconsidered unless there is significant new information to report. For a number of applicants, Law School Admission Test results were not competitive and, if there are reasons to believe that circumstances interfered with achieving valid test results, the applicant may want to consider retaking the test. To apply for admission for a future year, submission of new, updated application materials would be necessary.

We do appreciate your interest in Pacific McGeorge as well as the time and effort expended in the application process. We regret that the decision was not a favorable one and wish you every success as you pursue your career goals.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr Chan:

We regret to advise you that we are unable to grant you admission to the August, 2009 entering class of the University of Richmond School of Law. More than 2,000 candidates were competing for a place in our first-year class of 148. Our small size, though perhaps one of our greatest assets, seems at this time of year a liability. We regret that we were unable to accommodate many more candidates from the splendid applicant pool.

Please be assured that your application was given every consideration. After several months of review, admission has been offered to those who presented credentials with a median LSAT of 162 (87th percentile) and a median GPA of 3.48. In making our decision, your academic achievement, test scores and other factors which were presented on your behalf were reviewed. It is on the basis of these criteria and the relationship of your credentials to our other applicants that our decision was made.

We realize the appraisal of academic and personal promise is far from an exact science. Admissions decisions are based on the collective subjective judgment of those on the Admissions Committee. We are very confident we can justify and support those affirmative decisions we've made but unfortunately we cannot justify every rejection. Far more qualified applicants than we can accommodate apply each year and some not admitted will be extraordinarily successful elsewhere. Although we have done our best to judge fairly, we announce our decision with humility.

We appreciate your interest in the University of Richmond School of Law and want you to realize that while we send you this negative decision, we wish for you every success for the future. You have complimented us by applying to our Law School and now we share your disappointment.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr Chan:

Your application for admission to the 2009 Entering Class has been reviewed, and I regret to inform you that we are unable to make you an offer of Admission.

We will receive close to 3,000 applications for the 310 places in the 2009 Entering Class. As a result, competition for admission is intense. While the Admission Committee continues to give great weight to qualitative factors as a part of its review, quantitative factors also played a significant role in an applicant pool of this size. So that you may evaluate your relative competitiveness, it may be useful for you to know the following:

- The average LSAT for the 2008 Entering Class was 157 We expect the LSAT average to be similar or higher among members of the 2009 Entering Class.
- The median undergraduate grade point was 3.4 for 2008 these numbers will be similar or higher
- Applicant volume to the School of Law has remained high in recent years.

Equal weight is given to both life experience and undergraduate work. Given the number of applications we receive each year, we are forced to deny many candidates who demonstrate strong qualifications in areas of our assessment. Should you find your profile was similar to the numbers above; the late completion of your file may have played a role in our inability to offer you admission. As a rolling admission school (and at a time when applications to law school have increased nationwide) you are encouraged to submit your application at the earliest possible date.

The decision of our Admission Committee is final with regard to admission to the 2009 Entering Class. There are no appeals to our decision. Should you choose to discuss the Committee's decision or wish to discuss admission to the 2010 Entering Class, you may correspond by letter or e-mail with the Office of Admission. Applicants may also meet with a counselor after May 1, 2009, to discuss their file in person.

Your interest in the School of Law is appreciated, and we wish you every success in your future plans.

The Admissions Committee has completed its review of your application for admission to The University of Tennessee College of Law

I regret that we are unable to offer you a place in the 2009 entering class. Difficult decisions had to be made among the many talented candidates whose applications we were privileged to review. Virtually every candidate showed characteristics which could lead to success in law school, and the personal glimpses into the lives, the motivations, the goals and the accomplishments of our candidates made these determinations all the more difficult.

Please realize that this determination was a comparative one, based on all applications received, and was by no means an absolute judgment of your qualifications to study and eventually practice law. Dear Roy:

Thank you for your interest in the fall 2009 entering class. It is with regret that I inform you that your application has been denied. Each year, Texas Wesleyan University School of Law receives a wealth of applications from highly qualified and talented people interested in joining our community. This fall has been no exception.

All applications are reviewed comprehensively with focus placed on an applicant's academic achievement, personal statement, letters of recommendation, and extracurricular and community involvement. Texas Wesleyan University School of Law seeks to admit those students who not only are competitive within our entire applicant pool but also those who have the ability to further enhance our vibrant law school community.

However, given the number of applications we receive each year, we are forced to deny many candidates who demonstrate strong qualifications in one or more areas of our assessment. If you choose to reapply, your current application and supporting documents will remain on file for one year. You are also encouraged to submit new or additional information and materials at that time.

Dear Mr. Chan,

After careful review of your application, the Admissions Committee has determined that it is unable to offer you admission to the Fall 2009 entering class at Widener University School of Law

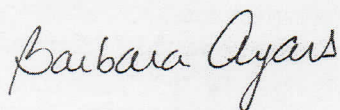

Admissions decisions rendered by the Committee are based upon a comprehensive review of all submitted material. All applicants are considered for regular admission as well as for participation in our trial admissions program.

The undergraduate grade point average and the LSAT score are extremely important academic variables and weigh heavily in the Committee's decision. In addition, the Committee carefully considers other supporting material. Letters of recommendation, professional experience, graduate school performance, community involvement and information presented in the personal statement can significantly impact the Admissions Committee decision. Seats in the entering class are limited and the applicant pool is large and competitive. Although many of our applicants have meaningful professional or other life experience, as well as strong academic backgrounds, we are not able to grant admission to all who apply

However, we do offer two legal programs at our Delaware campus that you may find of interest as you continue your pursuit of a legal career. The Law School offers Master of Jurisprudence (MJ) programs. For additional information, contact the Office of Graduate Programs at (302) 477-2704. Also, the Legal Education Institute at Widener Law offers an ABA approved paralegal program with concentrations in criminal law, litigation, real estate and health law. Online courses are available. For more information contact the Legal Education Institute at (302) 477-2205

We appreciate your interest in Widener University School of Law and wish you success in your future endeavors.

Dear Mr Chan.

I am writing on behalf of the Admissions Committee to thank you for your 2009-2010 application for admission and for your interest in the University of Wisconsin Law School. We regret to inform you that we are not able to offer you a place in the Fall 2009 entering class, and that your application has been denied.

The Admissions Committee reviewed your application with care and considered all of the information you submitted. We anticipate receiving approximately 3000 applications by our March deadline. As a result we have had to be extremely cautious in the number of students we are able to admit as we hope to enroll a class size of only 240 students. A great many applicants demonstrated strong qualifications and the ability to engage in the study of law. It is unfortunate that those who wish to enter law school at the University of Wisconsin will not be able to do so, and it is unpleasant for us to turn away so many interesting people.

We would like to extend our best wishes to you for success in your search for a fruitful legal education and successful career, and wish you much success in all of your future endeavors.

Respectfully,

1968 - CELEBRATING 40 YEARS - 2008

Promoting Diversity in Legal Education through the Thurgood Marshall Legal Educational Opportunity Program

April 2009

Dear CLEO Applicant:

We regret to inform you that you were not selected to participate in the CLEO 2009 Summer Institute Program. This year, we received hundreds of applications for the 80 seats that were available. Unfortunately, we are not able to provide a seat for all the deserving students who would like to participate in the program.

If you have been admitted to law school and are planning to attend in the fall, please take a few moments to consider participating in our Attitude Is Essential Pre-law Seminar. This three-day weekend program has been designed to prepare you for a successful law school experience. It will be held in Atlanta, GA and Los Angeles, CA.

Some of the topics that will be covered include: a mock law class, the demands of law school, debt management, introduction to legal thinking, preparing for and taking law school examinations. Participants will be assigned to the program closer to their home. You will be required to devote the entire weekend to your studies. Please do not ask to participate in this program if you cannot commit to giving 100 percent.

The CLEO/Thurgood Marshall Attitude Is Essential Pre-law Seminar is federally funded through a grant from the U. S. Department of Education at no cost to eligible participants. In order to meet the eligibility requirements, you must be either a low-income, minority or otherwise disadvantaged student. Participants must pay for their transportation to and from the seminar, and will receive a travel stipend upon successful completion. Travel stipends are mailed 3 weeks after each event.

If you have been admitted to a law school and would like to participate in this program, please complete the attached form and mail it (along with a copy of your law school acceptance letter) to CLEO immediately so that we may consider your request. You must include a copy of your law school acceptance letter for consideration.

If you have not been admitted to law school and intend to apply again next year, please begin the application process as early as possible. For individuals planning to retake the LSAT, now is the best time to start preparing. Spend at least thirty minutes every day working on prior exams. This will enable you to develop confidence in your ability to excel on the exam. A prep course can be extremely helpful but it will not take the place of sitting down and working on problems on a daily basis. We would be happy to discuss your application with you. To schedule an appointment on April 23-24, 2009 please contact us on 202.828.6100. Best wishes in your professional pursuits. Thank you for considering CLEO.

Sincerely,

Thomasine M. Williams
Admissions Director
